Tropical Storm Isaias Approaching St. Johns County with Potential Storm Surge, High Winds, and Coastal Flooding Impacts

St. Johns County, FL – St. Johns County Administration and Emergency Management participated in briefings with the National Hurricane Center and the Florida Department of Emergency Management on Sunday that indicated Tropical Storm Isaias became more disorganized overnight and therefore, the threat level to St. Johns County has been downgraded. The County remains under a Tropical Storm Warning for coastal St. Johns and a Coastal Flood Advisory with the potential for storm surge, high winds, and coastal flooding being the current primary concerns.

All garbage, yard debris, and recycling collections will remain on schedule and all County operations will be open for standard business hours. The Emergency Operations Center will remain open overnight on Sunday and throughout Monday for emergency response as necessary. In addition, the Emergency Operations Center Hotline, 904.824.5550, will remain available to the public through midnight on Sunday and will resume operations at 6 a.m. on Monday. All judicial court functions, with the exception of first appearances, have been cancelled for Monday.

Residents may find local Tropical Storm Isaias information on the County's website at www.sjcfl.us/HurricaneIsaias.
