

St. Vincent's health center planned for CR 210 area in St. Johns County

By Stuart Korfhage
April 6, 2017

St. Vincent's HealthCare recently broke ground on a new health center in St. Johns County at County Road 210.

The center is one of two added or being added in North Florida.

One center opened March 17 in Madarin. The St. Johns County facility is slated to open in November.

In a news release, St. Vincent's announced it also has preliminary plans for several additional health centers throughout Jacksonville.

St. Vincent's is part of Ascension, the nation's largest Catholic and nonprofit health system.

"We believe delivering the highest quality care in the most convenient locations at the most appropriate price creates the highest value for our patients, and it's simply the responsible thing for St. Vincent's to do in accordance with our healing mission," said Tom VanOsdol, interim president & CEO of St. Vincent's HealthCare, in the release.